An international economist with 35 years experience in multinational financial services organizations, Kurt Kendis has worked as a strategist, analyst, and consultant for boards, senior managers, and executives worldwide. With a background in academia, he is currently Managing Director at The Banking Group. His subject matter expertise is global strategic management, restructuring, multinational risk, board development, and capacity building in emerging markets. Mr. Kendis has developed a unique approach to problem-solving, where actual data is used to project alternative scenarios for senior managers' consideration.

For global organizations -- all with an emphasis on emerging markets -- Mr. Kendis applies Dynamic Scenario Analysis to restructuring, planning and risk management. His projects include individual coaching, on-site data gathering and analysis, and the synthesis of alternative choices into policy recommendations and seminars. Mr. Kendis is recognized world-wide for his ability to manage this process across large multinational groups and in multiple languages and venues.

Recently Mr. Kendis's engagements have been global. Work in Latin America, Africa, Asia and the subcontinent has expanded to Central Banks and accountancy firms as well as local and global banks. The new regulatory and accounting environment surrounding Basel III has been the focus of his work with Boards.

Mr. Kendis has assumed a new role for his corporate customers in their Senior Management and Board Development—that of aggregator. His activity is research based. He combines research and modeling to assist senior executives' decision making. He has advised boards of directors and trustees of corporations, while continuing executive coaching in strategy, governance, and risk.
